Train Ride from Hell

Re-imagined from the movie Anastasia

Train Ride from Hell

Vlad, Anastasia, and Dimitri are taking a train ride to Paris France from St. Petersburg, Russia in 1956. Vlad discovers that he and Dimitri have forged the wrong documents.

Vlad says, “Blue is not our color, oh no!” The papers were supposed to have orange writing.

Anastasia yells out, “Great! Add perjury to our list of sins committed!”

Dimitri chimes in and shouts, “Well at least you weren’t the sinner in question!”

Vlad says to both of them, “What do you think they will do to us?”

Anastasia is quiet for a moment and suddenly says, “Well I’m the princess of Russia, I don’t know what will happen to the both of you.” She bursts out sudden howls of laughter.

Vlad and Dimitri just roll their eyes violently. The train’s wheels squeal like a stuck pig. Swift footsteps are heard.

Anastasia says, “Do you think it may be time for us to meet our doom?”

The footsteps keep going. Dimitri says, “We are all being highly paranoid.”

Vlad says, “I agree, as long as we are quiet and do not rock the boat we are as good as gold.”

Anastasia lays down and goes to sleep on the padded bench. Dimitri tries to wake her when they arrive in Paris.

She accidentally slaps him and says “Oh my goodness! I thought you were the authorities!”
